

Mr. Shelby specializes in complex commercial litigation and catastrophic personal injury cases. He performs work on behalf of both plaintiffs and defendants in state, federal, administrative and appellate courts throughout the country. Mr. Shelby's commercial litigation practice includes cases involving civil fraud, class action lawsuits, patent and trademark litigation, contracts, advertising claims, shareholder disputes, complex insurance coverage issues, injunctive relief, administrative proceedings before federal and state agencies, franchise disputes and general business litigation. He has also provided services in defense of legal liability claims asserted against other Utah law firms. Plaintiff-related work varies from wrongful death and catastrophic personal injury - including brain injury and permanent disability cases - to commercial plaintiff cases for intellectual property theft, breach of contract, shareholder disputes and civil fraud. A member of the trial team in defense of the so-called Olympic Bribery case, Mr. Shelby also has considerable experience in white-collar criminal defense, as well as medical malpractice defense, pharmaceutical liability and mass tort matters
